vil to make him look ridiculous to the rest of the world.

He won't mind his wedding pictures so much, no matter how they turn out, because a man honestly expects to look somewhat ridiculous on his wedding day. Nor will he complain overmuch against his passport pictures as women do, for he recognizes that even customs officers are to kindly to gaze critically at them. Passport pictures, he knows, are universally recognized as horrible and unflattering. Some people even send copies to their friends at Christmas with the notation "guess who?"

After 40, a man will go to the photographer only under family duress or group pressure. When the official picture is taken at the annual office banquet, he tries to bury his face in the fried chicken, or hide behind the man in front of him.

When he is, at times, forced to make the galling trip to a photographic studio he is prepared for the worst. All his life he has jeered at John Barrymore because the actor preferred to have his picture taken from an angle that showed his favored profile.

Now he envies Barrymore. After all, Barrymore was lucky to have one side that looked better than the other.

When the portrait is finally delivered and unwrapped, he knows what the family will say: "NOT Bad."

"After they have gone to bed, he sits and looks at the picture all by himself. Not bad? Are they crazy? Is he really that fat? What did the camera do to rob him of so much hair?"

He tiptoes to the bookshelf, gets out his old school annual, blows off the dust opens it to his youthful picture.

"Mmmmm now bad," he murmurs. "By golly, I had a good strong face as a kid."

"But they had decent photographs then. What's happened to photographs today? They make a fellow look so namby-pamby. They can't even bring out the character a man's got."

As he goes to bed however, he will realize, if he's honest that 23 years from now the new picture he just had made will look pretty good to him too. Everything is better 23 years later.

Newswomen to Meet With First Lady

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower goes today to a birthday luncheon given in her honor by Washington newswomen, whom she rarely meets newswomen. The First Lady doesn't hold news conferences and reporters get close only when she makes public appearances or poses for pictures at the White House. They rarely get a chance these days to ask her direct questions for publication.

The White House explanation is that Mrs. Eisenhower's life is her own affair. She wasn't elected to public office.

Some White House observers think Mrs. Eisenhower is taking even less of a public role than her predecessor, Mrs. Bess Truman. One reason may be that President Eisenhower himself is not seen in public as much as was Truman.

The luncheon today is limited to members of the American Newspaper Women's Club and the Women's National Press Club to celebrate Mrs. Eisenhower's 61st birthday, which falls on Thursday. It's strictly a social affair, with about 200 attending.

Mrs. Eisenhower will be entertained on her birthday Thursday at a luncheon given by wives of the Little Cabinet members at the exclusive Sulgrave Club.

Coffee - Stubblefield

Miss Aleta Joy Coffee, daughter of Mrs. C.M. Coffee, became the bride of Dutch Jerry Stubblefield Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Stubblefield Sr., of Fort Worth, Texas in a ceremony solemnized at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, Nov. 10 in the First Methodist Church. The Reverend Virgil D. Keeley, pastor of the church, officiated at the double ring service.

Vows were pledged before a back ground of dahoon holly flanked with seven-branched candelabra entwined with plumosa fern and holding tall white tapers. Floor baskets of white gladioli and jade fern completed the altar decorations.

Preceding the ceremony, Luther Hollamon presented an organ program of nuptial music including Schubert's "Ave Maria," "Through the Years," "Indian Love Call," and "Always," which was played as the mothers entered. Miss Colleen Coffee of Shreveport, sister of the bride, sang "Till" and "Because."

Dee Coffee, brother of the bride, and Charles Perkins of Memphis, Tenn., brother-in-law of the bride served as ushers. They also lighted the candles as the organist played "Choir de Lunc" and "Through the Years."

The traditional wedding marches were used. While the couple exchanged vows, the organist played Rombert's "Serenade." At the conclusion of the ceremony, as the couple knelt at the chancel rail for the nuptial blessing, Miss Colleen Coffee sang "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride given in marriage by Jack Coffee, her brother, wore a gown of white chantilly lace and tulle with a scooped neckline, fitted bodice, and short sleeves. The ballerina-length beautiful skirt was fashioned of accordion pleated tulle over lace. Her chapel-length illusion veil fell from a pearl hair.

She wore white lace gloves, elbow length, and carried a cascade bouquet of lily of the valley centered with a single white orchid. Her only ornaments were a pearl necklace and matching earrings.

Miss Alice Coffee served her sister as maid of honor. She wore a ballerina-length dress of pink satin fashioned with short sleeves complemented by elbow-length gloves. Her head piece was of white net flanked with embroidered knobs. She carried a crescent bouquet of blue feathered carnations. The bride's maids, Mrs. Dee Coffee, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Jerry Stubblefield of Fort Worth, Texas, blue satin dresses, the style and accessories being identical to those worn by the maid of honor. Each carried crescent bouquets of pink feathered carnations.

Serving as flower girl was little Miss Pamela Hudson, niece of the bride. She wore a pink satin dress patterned after the maid of honor's dress, a white satin bandeau, and short white gloves. Master Joey Hudson, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

Jerry Stubblefield of Fort Worth, Texas, served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Robert Montgomery Jr., and James Whitworth Jr., both of Fort Worth.

The bride's mother chose a broad-caded tulle dress with matching accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of blue carnations.

The groom's mother wore a pink broad-caded tulle dress with matching accessories and a corsage of blue carnations.

Immediately following the nuptials, a reception was held in the church. Floor baskets of wedding flowers were placed at vantage points in the reception room. The receiving line included the bride and groom and their parents.

The bride's table was covered with white organza over pink tulle and overlaid with white net which was tied at the corners with white satin bows and white wedding bells. The triple-tiered wedding cake, embossed with white roses and frosted wedding bells, was topped with a miniature bride and groom. The center piece was an arrangement of pink and white carnations flanked by tall burning white tapers.

Mrs. Charles Perkins of Memphis, Tennessee, presided at the bride's cake. Miss Nell Coffee of Shreveport, La., sister of the bride, poured the punch. Mrs. Ed Price of Diboll, Texas, sister of the bride, presided at the bride's book.

For travel the bride chose a gold and black tulle suit trimmed in black velvet. Her accessories were of black. At her shoulder she pinned the white orchid from her bridal bouquet.

DOROTHY DIX

Adults of Tomorrow Need Today's Adults

Dear Dorothy Dix: People are always willing and talking about teen-agers, but don't grown-ups realize they have a responsibility to us? The reason so many of us go bad is freedom. Unless a teen-ager is brought up in a closely knit family she seeks entertainment outside. Then, of course, she goes for bigger but not necessarily better thrills.

It adults had more activities in the family — picnics, parties and especially get-togethers of birth-days, or any special occasion outside diversions would lose their allure. The adults of tomorrow feed the adults of today, not only to support and educate them, but for a lifelong influence.

Dear P. D. Well spoken. And I hope every parent who reads this column will heed a young lady's plan.

One of the fundamental problems of today is the need for more family activity. There is, when many teen-agers get it, they still aren't quite satisfied. It's the old story "Susie gets to go out nights; why can't I?"

You are a very intelligent and deep thinking young lady. Suppose you spearhead a movement in your neighborhood for more evenings at home with the folks. Make it a popular activity and you'll have the satisfaction of cutting down juvenile problems in your neck of the woods.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Don and I have gone steady for four months and now he's moving away. I'm heartbroken. Right now we aren't Walter Jones, Rt. 1 Hope.

Majors Trying to Work With PCL

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Ford Frick and other baseball officials had another try at figuring out a new alignment for the Pacific Coast League today. Frick, representative of the PCL, Texas League and American Assn. along with officials of the Giants and Dodgers the two clubs which invaded PCL territory, and George Trautman, boss of the Millers will be in on the huddle.

PGA Meets to Iron Out Tour Problems

By HAL WOOD

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UP) — The embattled Professional Golfers' Association went into executive session today to study the pressing problems involving sportsperson "biggest show on earth" — the $1,400,000 touring professional tournament program.

The major problems were these: 1. Should the annual PGA tournament, a matched play affair, be changed to medal play so that the financial losses in this event could be reduced?

2. Is the new PGA program of keeping entrance fees from all tournaments the proper procedure or is it alienating the sponsors? 3. Is the selection system for the Ryder Cup team correct, or should there be some changes made so that such stars as Sammy Snead, Ben Hogan and Jimmy Demaret would be eligible without playing in more tournaments?

4. Should the PGA put into effect a stronger disciplinary program to keep "in line" men who speak against their own organization?

Right now some of the sponsors are rebelling at the new PGA edict whereby that organization collects the entrance fees in all PGA sponsored events.

An organization, known as International Golf Sponsors Association — Paul O. Ridings, executive secretary from Fort Worth, Tex. — is on the local scene attempting to band together sponsors to fight the program.

It was a good win for us and the boys did it the hard way, spotting them a touchdown and then coming from behind.

Our boys were real tough on defense, especially linemen, Lynn Wiggins, Jerry Thurman, Royce Weisenberger, Jimmy May and Roy Rowe. Our defensive backs did a good job on pass defense against Magnolia's taller and faster ends.

Our offensive blocking was real sharp. Weisenberger and Adams split their tackles out and did a good job of keeping them out of play. Wiggins and guards, Jimmy Porterfield and Jack King blocked real well, opening several holes in the middle of the line, that is where we hurt them most.

Jimmy May made two good catches for TD's and blocked well. Our backs, Terry Don Thurman, Don Booth and Delton Hatfield ran harder than they have all year.

Tommy Polk picked up some key yardage and completed 5 for 7 passes, two of which were for touchdowns, and made a touchdown himself.

Our injuries are almost healed and we should be at almost full strength from now on.

Coach John Pierce: "The line turned in another good display of desire and determination down where football gets a little rough. Hope's boys were really after a win and in doing so came home feeling good and with a win in the bag. I'll tell you one thing, it pleased the coaches just as much as it did the players to win this one. They all showed the desire that at times we lack, but were there all night at Magnolia Friday night."

As for Arkadelphia, they have a big fast club, larger than ours, man for man. If they decide to play ball this Friday night they will be hard to beat. They will be out for us after last year's 51-42 loss."

Aggies Solid in First Place of Grid Ratings

By HUGH FULLERTON JR. Of The Associated Press

The first six teams held their places in the Associated Press college football poll today as the nation's sports writers and broadcasters again gave Texas A&M top billing by a decisive margin.

But some real scraps developed among the leaders. Oklahoma and Auburn finished only eight points apart in the race for second place. Michigan State led Iowa by 12 points for fourth and Ohio State edged out Tennessee by 34 for the sixth spot.

With 184 experts casting ballots the powerful Texas Aggies drew 60 first-place votes and a total of 1,577 points on the usual basis of 10 for each vote for first, 9 for second etc. Oklahoma clung to second by the margin of 46 firsts and 1,411 points to Auburn's 42 and 1,403.

The figures for all three unbeaten teams were comparable to those of a week ago, when 107 votes were cast. The Aggies won their eighth straight game by an impressive 19-6 margin over Southern Methodist; Oklahoma's Sooners, troubled by a lagging offense most of the season, rolled to a 19-14 victory over West-Point; Missouri; and defense-minded Auburn checked Mississippi State 15-7.

Michigan State's 34-6 walloping of now-defunct Notre Dame barely increased the Spartans' fourth-place margin over Iowa which rolled over Minnesota 44-20.

Tennessee was the only team in the first 10 a week ago which improved its position. The Volunteers 21-6 winners over Georgia Tech, moved up from ninth to seventh.

Navy and Army dropped from seventh and eighth to ninth and tenth as Mississippi jumped into the eighth spot. Ole Miss, a 14-12 winner over Louisiana State, is unbeaten in the Southeastern Conference.

North Carolina State a 7-6 upset victim of William and Mary, lost its hold on 10th place and almost dropped out of sight in the ratings.

Coleman Takes Over Princeton Coaching

PRINCETON, N.J. (UP) — Dick Coleman, who guided Princeton's football team to first place in the Ivy League as acting head coach, took over today as the full-fledged new coach of the Tigers on a three-year contract extending through 1960.

Coleman was officially named head coach Monday in his 43rd birthday, succeeding his gridiron "father," Charley Caldwell, who died of cancer on Nov. 1.

The Tigers currently leading the Ivy League with a record of six victories in seven games under Coleman, greeted the announcement of his appointment at Monday's practice with a cheer and then went back to work getting ready for a key tussle this Saturday against Yale.

Coleman, 17th head coach in Princeton's 89-year football history, promised the squad to "do the best job possible."

Coleman had been acting head coach since Sept. 23, five days before the start of the season, when poor health forced Caldwell to drop the reins.

Archer Wins Decision Over DeCola

NEW YORK (UP) — Welterweight Jimmy Archer, a fighting stevedore from Pier 68, will get his first main event at Madison Square Garden, Dec. 20, for scoring his 12th straight victory Monday night at St. Nicholas Arena.

Archer, 22, won his second consecutive split decision over Tony DeCola of Brooklyn in their return TV 10-rounder. Jimmy took the first split verdict over 21-year-old DeCola in the same ring on Sept. 30.

Archer weighed 146 pounds; DeCola, 147.

Matchmaker Billy Brown of the International Boxing Club, which has no apparent connection with little St. Nick's, was at the ring-side Monday night, and signed Archer for a Dec. 20 fight against an opponent to be agreed upon later.

Coincidentally, Archer's 19-year-old brother Joey, also a welterweight, scored his 12th straight victory at St. Nick's Monday night by winning every round in the six-round semifinal with Paul Griffin of Brooklyn.

During the Archer-DeCola main event, four fist fights broke out among the rival admirers, and police ejected the principals from the arena.

It was Jimmy's 15th victory in 16 fights and DeCola's ninth defeat in 35.

DeCola's good performance, despite his defeat, earned him another TV bout at St. Nick's on Nov. 25 against Larry Boardman of Marlboro, Conn.

Revives Film of U. S. From 1900-1917

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (U)—Can you think of a more difficult television assignment than re-creating the story of American life between 1900 and 1917 from old films?

It's been done, however—and a fascinating hour of TV entertainment it is to one who has seen it in advance. The public will have the same opportunity Nov. 21 when Project 20 presents "The Innocent Years" on NBC-TV.

"At first, to find the film sounded like that proverbial blank wall detectives run into on murder cases," says Daniel Jones, chief film researcher for the Project 20 staff under Henry Salomon. But then things began to happen. They turned up extraordinary films of President McKinley's funeral, of Mark Twain at home of immigrants arriving at Ellis Island. Thanks to their discoveries you will see Coney Island and horse-drawn fire engines racing to a fire, Teddy Roosevelt and President Taft.

How was this absorbing history on film recovered?

"In museums and the Library of Congress," says Jones. "In old laboratories and attics, by reading old trade magazines, and talking to old men in the business with phenomenal memories. Above all, I guess, by following your nose in old vaults and learning

CHAPTER XXX

When Morgan wheeled his grub around Gallo knew for certain an important decision had been reached, otherwise Morgan would not leave camp without first having his grub. Gallo's body still ached from the beating Dave had given him. He made up his mind he wanted to miss none of this.

On the spur of the moment he fell in behind Morgan, completely abandoning his sentry post. When Morgan heard the horse he hauled up until Gallo was abreast.

Gallo lied glibly. "Kains sent me to give a hand."

Morgan arched one eyebrow slightly. Then, taking in Gallo's bruised and battered face, he grinned. "All right," he said. "It's Dave Sharadin I'm after. Let me have first shot!"

Dave brought the stallion to home quarters at dusk and tied it fast to the ring bolted through a pine hitching post. Slip came running that the stuff that stank worst was the best for our project.

By that he meant that the film made at the time was the so-called "nitrate" film which smells like phosgene gas as it ages. Under the present safety film, it spoiled easily—decomposed and then exploded.

ving from the cookshack to help him lower his father. Together they carried the remains into the house and laid Blueli's body on his bed. Pale and trembling by now, Slip said softly:

"Want I should turn the nores into the corral?"

Dave nodded.

Leaving the stillness of Blueli's room, he ate a little. Then he paced outside in the gathering twilight. Behind the hitching post he drew up short, standing with his hands folded on its top. Beyond him unwound the trail for Prole's. Sundown is here! He would be on his way shortly to settle with Prole.

Presently he drew erect, hearing the padding hoof tread of a horseman coming in stealthily. The beat of the rider thrust the thought of Morgan across his mind. He hadn't seen Morgan since last night, but he didn't minimize him. He wondered if Ferris had gotten through without a showdown, or was Morgan coming in to report success in executing Kains' orders?

Automatically Dave withdrew his six-gun and spun the cylinder checking his loads. The horse sound had died off somewhere but Dave was sure the man waited out there. He ran to the corral, fighting the stallion closer to him and tightening the cinches and then climbing into the saddle. The stallion tossed its head about, not quite certain whether he would submit. But this rider who sat aboard was an expert horseman, and the dun broke into his brisk walk, satisfied Dave was his friend.

The first screen of trees was a thin stringer beyond which Dave located the waiting horseman. Even in the darkness the horse was recognizable as Lockridge's black. But the rider standing before him was blurred so badly by darkness that Dave was uncertain whether this was a trap.

"Dave? Is that you?"

It was Sherry! Remembering her coolness he suppressed his rising excitement. He knelt the dun nearer, then climbed from his saddle and stood beside her.

"It's not safe—you shouldn't have come."

She made a slight gesture with her hands, turning to face him fully. "Is your father at home? I haven't yet met him. I thought it would be nice."

He told her about Blueli's death while she stood mutely by. A dark forehead and she touched him and troubled line appeared in her lightly with her hand.

"Dave—I am sorry."

In Sherry there was an understanding that man alone is only half; that it is up to the woman to complete him.

"Will you be riding to Prole's?" she asked.

"I'm on my way. You must stay at Block S. Slip—the cook—is there."

"This is what you must do? Each of us must live in truth with our own selves."

"I've given Prole his choice. Now the time's up."

Out of a frown her face drew a clean, full smile. Her one hand was encircled by Dave's fingers but now her free arm found its way against his back. Still smiling, with bright points lighting her eyes, she lifted and pressed her lips against his cheek. His hand dropped beneath her chin, tilting her face upward. He found her mouth hungrily and a thousand years fell away.

When he released her she was breathing heavily and he caught her slight trembling. Her dark eyes met his without lowering.

She sat still a long time wondering how she might make it clear. It was not too sharply focused in her own mind, but a woman's soul was her own; what she did brought her contentment or else spread misery throughout her days.

Again he drew her close. This time she broke his hold and sat down on an ancient windfall. He found his place beside her and she dropped her hand over his. Soberness had stolen back to her mood. She was grave as she told him:

"Prole is moving out of the Hollow."

For a long moment he was quiet, considering. "Is this because of you, Sherry?"

"Melinda, mostly. Prole's listening to her. At last, and Lockridge Doc offered them his cabin at Wolf Creek as a home, and I hope Prole never takes Melinda away from him."

Suddenly he asked, "What made you wait this long before telling me about Prole?"

She smiled at him with her eyes filled with a deep and complex amusement. "Maybe," she said softly, "maybe I wanted to be near you this little while before you rode off."

CHAPTER XXXI

A short distance down the trail, Dave felt that warning which comes to a man in strange moments. He hauled up and seized the reins of Lockridge's black.

"What is it, Dave?" Sherry asked.

"You've got to return to Block S. I can't tell you, it's just the wind's full of danger."

"I see nothing—there's not a sound."

"Just it, Sherry. It's a quiet of death." He swung her black by the reins, saw the flash of impatience strike her face. She was annoyed with him, but she touched the black with her heel, walking in over the return trail to Block S. He sensed an immediate lifting of weight that had burdened him.

When the sound of the black's hoofs had dimmed on the trail he faced the stallion about, riding toward Piney Hollow. Light winded at him between the timber. One moment it was there and the next it was gone, like a star suddenly banked by clouds. He hammered on into the yard where he could see Prole's wagon standing by the gate. He failed to pake out Melinda but Lockridge was holding the reins. Prole had come to a halt beside the fence with his hand on a gun.

Dave threw up his arm. "Wait, Prole!" he cried.

It happened quickly after that as though his call had been the signal for which unseen gunmen waited. He caught the familiar winged sound of a bullet spinning past his head, the sharp bark of the rifle following quickly. Then he was lying face downward against the neck of the dun, stroking the stallion with his spurs.

A bullet struck the horn of his saddle, tearing leather and metal and shocking Dave with its nearness. He slipped one foot from the oxbow and went over the side of the stallion. He hit the grass low, running forward between the scrub pines. He was 70 feet from the gate now. Prole was standing in the clear before him with a gun unlimbered, but not certain which way to shoot. The shots so far had all been aimed at Dave, far had all been aimed at Dave.

Dave leveled his pistol, waiting for his target. Being used to thrusts by large bodies of men and horses, he expected riders coming in at full tilt from Piney Canyon, splitting to either side about the shanty, and joining here in this flat to wipe clean everything that lived or moved. His thoughts were on Kains. He had given Kains this open invitation for a double-cross. With Dave out of the way Kains owned all of Block S.

Gradually the utter lack of hoof tremor dawned on him and he realized this was not a general raid on Piney Hollow. Kains had not brought Block S here on the charge, and now the entire complexion of the fight changed. Dave doubted whether his bunkhouse crew would accept such an order from Kains. Vaguely he recalled shots from two directions. There were only two men. Morgan unquestionably Morgan would be somewhere out there beyond the clearing—and Gallo.

A searching bullet clipped the tree behind which Dave lay, losing bark wide and whining as it sped beyond his head. Altering his aim, Dave triggered two shots at the other man's position. He rolled swiftly away. Shots converged on the spot he had just left.

Dust and powder smoke reached his nostrils, and far among the hills the clap of those rifles bounced and echoed through the darkness. Now Dave found the second gunman's position to one side of the stable and nearer to him. He triggered two more shots, rolling again while his gun was still kicking up his arm. This time he collided against a rocky upthrust that indicated path. Opaque shadows were piled deep beneath these pines and he reached with his hand and found the rock about waist high.

He saw Prole go down beside the gate and realized from the way the body lay sprawled that Prole was dead. He could still see no sign of Melinda about the wagon. Doctor Lockridge apparently had tied his reins fast and was hurrying toward Prole. A cry

A&M Clears Way for an AIC Title

By JOHN R. STARR

Arkansas A&M's prestige took a couple of lumps last week but Coach Willis Leslie's Boll Weevils ser of dirt between his legs hauled him up short. There was hesitancy about his intentions, as though he doubted whether anyone meant to kill a doctor. Still he made his lunge back to the wagon, reaching it just as the rifleman beside the barn fired again.

Dave was certain the bullet struck Lockridge. He fell beside the wheel and lay there prone.

Overriding the fight came the sound of a horse on a headlong run. Dave couldn't understand who that would be until his mind returned to Sherry. By this time he had his pistol reloaded. With his ear close to the rock upthrust he fancied to other gunmen were moving off through the shade. But he wasn't sure. The only thing that made sense was the nagging fear in his brain that Sherry was returning.

The drumming of hoofs became louder. Doubt flickered through Dave and then he lifted himself to his feet. His gun was still swinging in his hand, his eyes casting into the shadows beside the barn. No hot came from here so now he decided both gunmen had fled the hollow. By now Lockridge's black was running in full view between the pines. He saw Sherry duck beneath low overhangs and rid into the clearing.

He ran swiftly toward her calling out: "Hold on!"

Strouther Family Reunion

Sunday night, Nov. 10, was a happy time in the home of Mrs. Polly Strouther and her daughter Mrs. Fannie Alexander when Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Strouther and sons, Arthur and Alford Jr. of Wichita, Kansas, joined Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Strouther of San Francisco, Calif. for a family reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Strouther have been in the city for several days visiting their parents, Mrs. Strouther and Mr. Mrs. Ned Forbes.

Coming and Going

Mr. and Mrs. Jack McFadden and family spent the weekend in Hot Springs as the guests of Mrs. McFadden's Uncle, E. B. Brewer. They were accompanied by Miss Bernice Strouther.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Roven Stuart, Alvin Ross of Tacoma, Wash., Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Gaston and son, Aubrey Adams of St. Louis arrived in Hope last week to attend funeral services of their mother and sister, Mrs. Wordia Stuart.

clear the path to a second straight Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference title with a 10-9 victory over Henderson Wednesday afternoon.

The Aggies' triumph apparently spelled an end to the College of the Ozarks' hopes that somebody would knock off the Weevils along the route.

Ozarks, the league's second place club, was eliminated from title consideration in its opening game, a 32-0 loss to AIM. "The Mountaineers haven't lost since, but a string of six straight victories is doing them no good at all. They just can't get back into the race unless A&M loses" and the Weevils seem disinclined to drop one.

A scheduled game with Ouachita is all that remains on A&M's slate. A postponed game with the same club will probably be cancelled if A&M runs up a good score in the schedule meeting.

Ozarks boosters have good reason to regret the circumstances that prohibited a second meeting between their Hilltoppers and the Weevils. Ozarks' thinks it can beat the Monticello school now but they were only slated to meet once, although all other AIC clubs participate in the double round robin installed a couple of years

Only Rice and Texas in Way of the Aggies

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

Of The Associated Press

Texas A&M collides with Rice at Houston Saturday in a game that can bring an abrupt end to the Southwest Conference football race or throw it into utter confusion.

The odds say it'll all be over when the smoke has cleared and A&M will be headed for the Cotton Bowl as conference champions the second year in a row.

What Rice did last week, however, indicates there could be some anxious moments for Aggie backers. The Owls whipped Arkansas 13-7 and showed a real tough defense for the first time this season. It was Arkansas that carried Texas A&M to the final gun in a gripping struggle two weeks ago.

The Aggies stayed undefeated and untied through eight games Saturday when they beat off determined Southern Methodist 19-8.

Should Rice upset the Nation's No. 1 team three outfits would be pitched back into the battle for first place if Texas managed to beat Texas Christian and four if Southern Methodist played Arkansas.

Texas will be meeting TCU at Austin while Southern Methodist hosts Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl. Arkansas is out of the race without a doubt and so is Baylor. The latter didn't help its cause Saturday when it fought Texas, 10-7, since it already had been eliminated from championship contention but it was a blow to Texas, which fell a game and a half away from front-runner Texas A&M.

Baylor hasn't a worry in the world this week. The Golden Bears take out for a rest, during which they will study ways and means ago when AIC membership dropped to five.

Ozarks won a non-conference game from Hendrix 19-6. State Teachers knocked off Ouachita 27-6, and Southern State was tripped by Southern Oklahoma 10-7 in other games last week. Tech's scheduled meeting with Central Oklahoma was cancelled at the request of the Oklahoma club.

13-Year-Old Boy Shot to Death

HOT SPRINGS (UP)—A 13-year-old boy was accidentally shot and killed while hunting near here yesterday afternoon.

Dead is Raymond Abbott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Abbott. Police said the boy was shot in the chest when a .22 caliber rifle held by Don Allen Sorrells, 15, also of Hot Springs, hit the boy's heart. The bullet struck the boy's heart. He was dead on arrival at a hospital.

Sorrells and three other boys in the hunting party told officials Abbott had apparently circled around them and jumped from a clump of bushes to scare them.

They said he startled them, and the gun discharged accidentally. No charges were filed, but the boys will have to appear at a hearing before Juvenile Judge J. M. Lowrey tomorrow.

of winning a couple so that they won't look so bad in the final standings.

Cow Coach Paul Bryant of A&M said he was gravely concerned over Rice and its victory against Arkansas. He wouldn't go any further in the comparison, however when reminded that Texas had beaten Rice, Southern Methodist beat Texas, and A&M then wammed Southern Methodist.

"It's what's just happened that counts," he said.

Texas Christian nursing some bowl dreams, was idle last week getting ready for its traditional battle with Texas. The Horned Frogs might move back into championship contention if they beat Texas although that would ruin the latter's hopes. But mainly TCU would like to finish with three straight victories. Which would give it the second best record in the league for the season.

"THEY'RE CATCHING ON, BUT THEY CAN'T CATCH UP." That's how lots of people feel about the "new 1958" cars that are trying to match the Dodge Swept-Wing look. These other cars have been lowered some, but still seem high and boxy by comparison. A few are "catching on" to fins, but they're years from "catching up." And the air suspension offered by some cars (at well over $100 extra) can't compare with the way-free, dip-free ride of Dodge Torson-Aire (standard equipment on all models).
